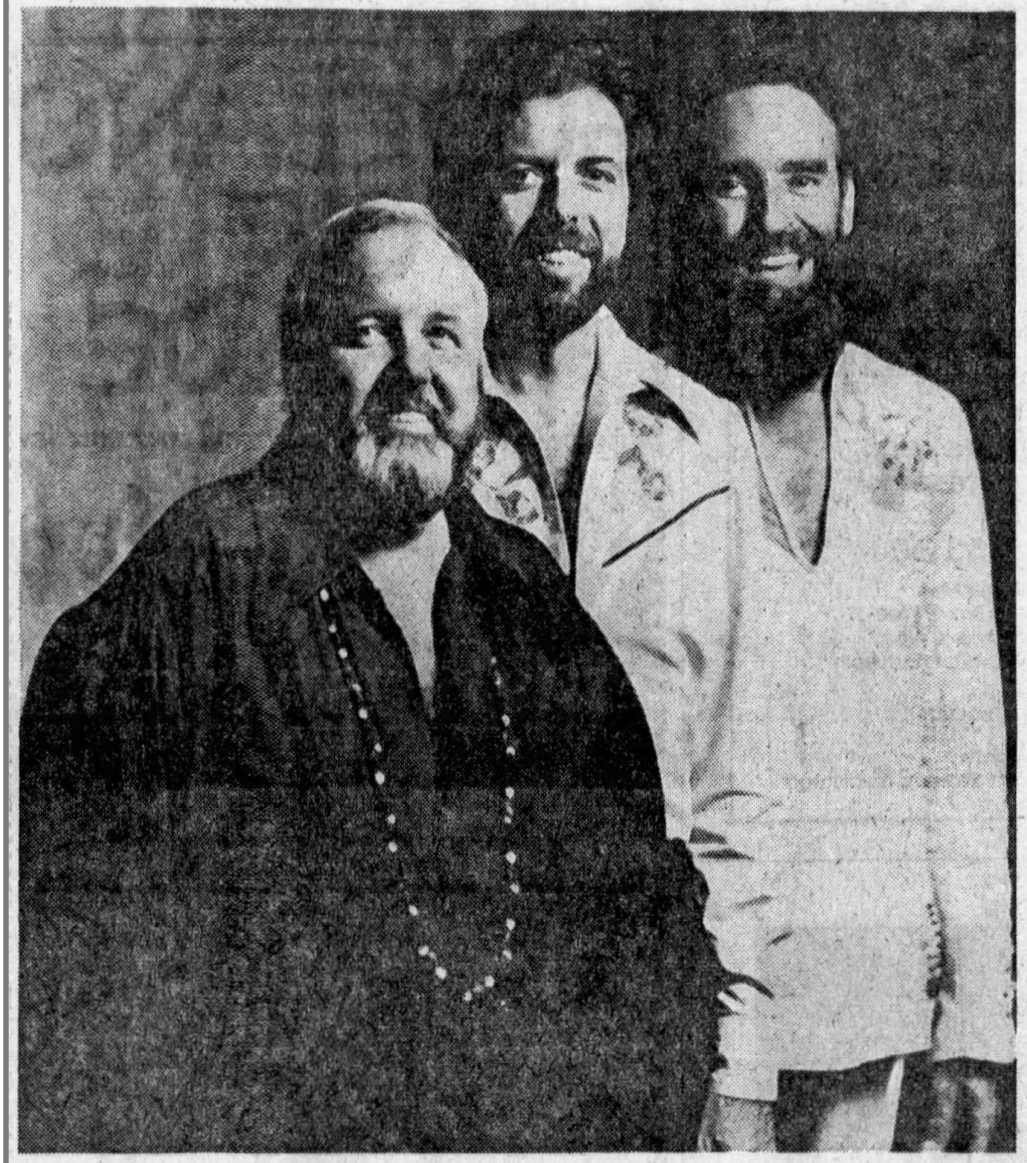
Limeliter Reunion concert set



Folk songs featured by trio

Glenn Yarbrough and the Limeliters scheduled.

Glenn Yarbrough and the Limeliters, the folk trio brought to the top of the charts in the 60s by the popular troubador, will return to Spokane for a "reunion'75" concert in the Opera House at 8 p.m. Oct. 31.

Yarbrough, a balladeer who has appeared in clubs, concerts and on college campuses since the Limeliters disbanded in 1963, has combined a singing career with round-the-world sailing cruises, a full recording schedule, the establishment of an orphanage in California, and two full concert tours each year.

With the Limeliters, Yarbrough recently recorded "Consider It Done" and "Pound of Peaches." The songs were written by another Limeliter, Alex Hassilev. Lou Gottlieb, a third member of the trio, has been composing actively during the past few years as well as establishing another career as a screen actor.

The Limeliters' repertoire includes such number one folk songs, as "Hey Li Lee Lo," "Those Were the Days," "Far Side of the Hill" and Yarbrough's hit song, "Baby the Rain Must Fall."

Tickets for the First Bank spotlight event are on sale at all First Bank branches in Spokane and the Valley.
